MINISTER'S STATEMENT

This Government is committed to delivering an improved standard of living for this State. The implementation of the strategies identified in Tasmania's social, environmental and economic plan, Tasmania Together, identifies the focus by which the State will continue to embrace change through partnerships between Government and the Community. This Department has a vital role in the achievement of these visions.

This Corporate Plan reinforces the direction and standards required to meet the expectations of the wider community. The Tasmanian community requires access to a Service that embraces and believes in the ideals of being completely accountable for its actions, commitment to excellence and a high quality service delivery.

The directions established and being pursued by the Department remain sound. The commitment by Government to increase resources, in terms of members and investment in technology, enhances the ability to ensure Tasmania continues to be the safest State in the Nation.

I am excited by what the future holds, in terms of new technology, the advancement in information management and intelligence-based policing.

It is my pleasure to endorse the Corporate Plan for the years 2000 to 2003. It provides the link between government expectations for the future, community needs and the framework within which the Department will continue to provide the highest quality policing service.

David Llewellyn
MINISTER, POLICE AND PUBLIC SAFETY.

SECRETARY'S STATEMENT

Project Baton, which drove many change initiatives within the organisation, has now essentially been completed, but many strands of activity that originated within that process will continue to drive change opportunities within our service.

The Administration is committed to continue working with Government on appropriate legislative change. The significant legislation and amendments passed by Parliament in the past three years are impressive and provide the best possible legislative base for police to go about the very difficult task of policing.

There are exciting things happening at national and state levels, including the Crimtrac initiative, which has Federal funding of $50m. It will provide an upgraded automated fingerprint information system and a DNA database. The State Government and the Department will be active participants in that initiative and new legislation in the form of the Forensic Procedures Bill has been drafted and should be in place by January 2001.

I have negotiated with Government to have the Forensic Science Services Tasmania (FSST) transferred to the Department of Police and Public Safety. The Director of FSST will report directly to me as the Secretary of the Department rather than as the Commissioner of Police. This will enable us to implement a structure and processes necessary to maximise the opportunities presented by the science of DNA and the DNA legislation. The Department is committed to adopting the highest ethical standards in the provision of DNA analysis. Anything less than ethical practice would put the whole program at risk and this can never be contemplated.

In the area of information management, our information groupings currently lack integration. We will, however, develop an integrated model. This highlights our commitment to provide members with the best possible opportunities and information with which to manage their responsibilities.

We will also maintain our commitment to properly equip members and enhance their safety. Policing and emergency management can be high-risk occupations and we recognise our duty of care in providing the safest possible work environment.

Richard McCreadie
COMMISSIONER OF POLICE
SECRETARY, DEPARTMENT OF POLICE AND PUBLIC SAFETY
